Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 10 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain, heavy at times, with strong winds. Milder than recently.

Today:
A murky day. Wet and windy throughout with persistent rain, possibly heavy at times, and increasingly strong winds. Although rather mild, it will feel quite cool in the blustery conditions. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Windy conditions increase, with potential gales throughout. Rain eases, giving a brief dry spell in the late evening, before further showery and blustery downpours linger all night. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Thursday:
Unsettled with strong winds and frequent showers, occasionally heavy. Feeling cool in the strong breeze, but brighter conditions with dry spells and clear skies at times, most likely around lunchtime. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Remaining unsettled throughout with strong winds. Sunny spells interspersed with blustery, heavy showers on Friday and Saturday, with a risk of hail. Cloudy, with lighter showers and winds on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.